Collaboration is Key

We are excited to bring our mid-century modern/California contemporary to the forefront in this issue of buildUP. We were thrilled to have been asked to help our homeowners with remodeling the old estate-style rambler into an inviting and exciting mid-century inspired home.

This spectacular project is the result of close collaboration between the home owners and the Boyer Building Corporation design team.

These homeowners had very specific ideas as to the architectural flavor of the home, the desire to incorporate these envisioned concepts into their existing home, and the function necessary for their lifestyle that includes working from home for not only them, but their entire company as well.

The Boyer team listened and considered the many pictures and inspirational ideas presented by our homeowners. We then set out to create a comprehensive design that merged the many ideas into a cohesive plan.

Our plan was one that considered the scale and structural qualities of the current home, as well as the site, site plan and how site attributes played into the use and aesthetics of the rooms within the remodeled home. For this project specifically, the new master bedroom and dinette/family room are situated and designed with corner windows taking advantage of the prairie grassland views that terminated into a county nature preserve. The clear story windows are situated to absorb the southern light. Additionally, design accommodations were built in for future patios and landscape connections to an existing outbuilding.

"The project was a successful collaboration because each party from homeowner to designers, to builder all listened and considered the elements of the project, understanding that the homeowners' best interests needed to be the primary focus."

Unique Elements Can Make Quite the Impression

Ideally, the design of a room or an entire house is carefully thought out for function, flow and good use of light. The icing on the cake comes when you can have a signature piece that captures the attention of all that come into the space.

We love when our projects speak to such a piece. In our Midcentury Modern home, we found we were fortunate to have THREE pieces right when you walk through the front door...the fireplace, the warm wood accent wall and the bank of skyline windows.

Our home's fireplace was developed so one could enjoy its majesty from three different rooms. It's the individual 2"x12" tiles that give the fireplace its stunning texture. It was important to have a skilled tile setter, with the forethought and attention to detail, to produce the desired pattern that the homeowner was trying to achieve. It is definitely the focal point of the great room.

The warm clear western red cedar focus wall stands strong next to our Ebony ext./ Ebony Int. (Polygon) Marvin Essential Series windows – giving the nod to the original inspiration – the California Chalet. Its gold tones warms up the coldest of days and brings nature inside along with the abundance of light that bounces off its grains. And finally, when you step inside our great room the flood of natural light not only comes from the bank of transom (Polygon) windows above – catching the sun or a peak of a cloud. One doesn't have to think too hard to fit a unique element into a newly remodeled space. The forethought of its placement and its relationship to the other aspects of the remodel will be well worth it in the end.

The build industry has never been so exciting. Despite the challenges we had in 2020, we are finding ourselves with very full calendars and busy meeting new and returning clients. Life is good and we feel very blessed. With this new year ahead, I wanted to take the opportunity to introduce myself and this issue of our buildUP seemed like the perfect opportunity.

I've been in the industry for 20 years and I have enjoyed working with a team (carpenters, production dept, and design/sales) that truly enjoys every aspect of the build process and has a unique attention to detail in everything that they produce, showing their gift of true craftsmanship. I am looking forward to building lifelong relationship with new customers and continue to nurture our extensive existing client base. The best is yet to come!

I started at Boyer Building in 2016 as a project manager where the experience of working with not only the client, but our unbelievable carpenters and vendors, gave me a great perspective on what it takes to get a project running, how to keep it on budget and help deliver a dream home/space better than even the homeowner envisioned. I'm thrilled to now be working in a sales role where I can be part of the project vision from the beginning.

I look forward to hopefully working with you at some point. Give me a call if you'd like to see how Boyer can help you out .
